

too often underserved—to focus our efforts.

Remember, these institutions compete with each other every day, but together, we came up with unified roadmap—a set of common goals and commitments that are endorsed by all 10 hospitals.

Over the next 3 years, these 10 hospitals will expand economic opportunities for local residents by: increasing local hiring by 15 percent—that means hundreds, or thousands, of new local hires; increasing the goods they purchase from local businesses by 20 percent—meaning millions in procurement dollars; and expanding summer employment, internships, and job training programs for residents in health fields.

The 10 hospitals are committing to opening new health clinics in schools and community centers and expanding the availability of mental health services.

They will enhance their clinical healthcare practices by increasing lead screening rates by 15 percent, reducing opioid prescribing by 20 percent, prioritizing maternal and infant health outcomes, and researching gun violence.

This new hospital-led effort is focused on two things: reducing gun violence and healthcare inequality. It is called the Chicago HEAL Initiative: “Hospital Engagement, Action and Leadership.”

According to the American Hospital Association, it may be the first such regional hospital partnership to tackle a local issue. The hospitals in the Chicago HEAL Initiative are already working on many these goals through an impressive variety of programs, but this new initiative will drive real change by bringing a new sense of partnership and focusing on activities outside of hospitals’ traditional services within their four walls.

I am pleased to launch this new effort, and will do whatever I can in Washington to help reduce violence and uplift communities.

160TH ANNIVERSARY OF YWCA

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I wish to congratulate the YWCA for its dedication to supporting women, girls, and their families in honor of the organization’s 160th anniversary.

YWCA is one of the oldest, largest, and most inclusive organizations in our Nation, and it has maintained a long history of distinguished service. The organization has been the forefront at some of the most important social movements of our time, from civil rights and women’s equality, to healthcare reform and gender-based violence prevention.

Nationwide, YWCA has 210 local associations across 47 States and the District of Columbia that help to empower 2 million women, girls, and their families each year. In my home State of Washington, there are 11 YWCA local associations, all of which have been proudly serving women and girls for over 60 years. These YWCAs protect and empower hundreds of thousands of Washingtonian women and children each year, and I am grateful for their work.

YWCA is the largest network of domestic violence service providers in our Nation and provides critical services to more than half a million women and girls each year, including support programs for survivors of sexual assault and domestic violence. Now, more than ever, this is vital to ensuring the safety and well-being of survivors across the country. Additionally, YWCA associations offer economic empowerment programs that engage over 260,000 women and racial justice education and training programs that engage over 160,000 people.

I stand today in strong support of YWCA’s mission to eliminate racism, empower women, stand up for social justice, promote peace, help families, and strengthen local communities.

I offer congratulations to YWCA on your 160 years of improving the lives of women and girls across the United States.

Thank you.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. President, today I wish to congratulate the YWCA for 160 years of service dedicated to supporting women, girls, and their families across the United States.

Throughout its storied history, YWCA has been committed to eliminating racism, empowering women, and freedom and dignity for all.

YWCA has been at the forefront of many critical social movements, including civil rights, women’s empowerment, gender-based violence prevention, and more. Additionally, it is the largest network of domestic violence and sexual assault service providers in the country, reaching more than half a million women and girls annually.

Serving a total of more than 2 million women, girls, and their families each year, with 210 local associations across 46 States and the District of Columbia, this organization’s impact is vast, but its focus is local.

In Ohio, there are 14 YWCA associations, and I am proud of the work they do in my State. I have worked to help YWCA’s important mission through my legislation to combat sex trafficking, help those gripped by addiction—particularly mothers and children—get the care they need, improve prisoner reentry, allow kids aging out of foster care to more easily access Federal support for housing, and more.

YWCA breaks barriers and empowers women to help them live up to their God-given potential. Congratulations on your 160 years of improving the lives of women and girls—and on many more to come.
